

Shop update: Pokekittens and Unicorns!

This week I updated my Society 6 shop with a handful of pieces that folks have been asking for.

First off is a Unicorns Are Jerks print I originally made for AMA-CON.

Some friends on Twitter asked me to put it on stuff, so here it is! T-shirts, tote bags, mugs, the whole enchilada, covered in a jerk unicorn eating a baby's candy.

Mighty assistant Jack says we should make this our work uniform:

Have to admit, I'm tempted.

Shortly after AMA-CON, I saw that sign-ups were open for our local Cat Video Festival's first ever artist alley. It was a last minute thing, but hello, tabling at a CAT VIDEO FESTIVAL? I am so down for that. So I started sketching cats...

And then wound up in the ER with agonizing hand pain 5 days before the festival. Tenosynovitis of my right thumb tendon. MY TENDONS DON'T WANT ME TO HAVE NICE THINGS.

What's an artist to do when faced with a busted dominant hand and a looming deadline for cat art?

I switched hands. My left hand is as clumsy as the female lead in a poorly written rom-com, but apparently it absorbed my high school art teacher's lesson on drawing wrong-handed. Lefty's art style is sketchier and looser than my usual, but I dig it.

The most popular thing I drew for the Cat Video Festival was my Starter Pokekittens. Look at these cutie patoots.

Fluffasaur (plant type)

Charmitten (fire type)

Purrle (water type - but poor little guy is afraid of water!)

And Pikamew (electric type)

All 4 of these little floofs are on my Society 6 shop, as a team and individually, on prints, shirts, tote bags, mugs, etc. (They're also up on my Tumblr, if you'd like to share them.)

Personally, I like the throw pillow.

And I want to wear this Purrtle tank top to show the world that I too am shaky and uncertain about my purpose in life.

Okay, enough ogling my own merch. Back to work!
